Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

- Claims 1-8, drawn to a method for analyzing an integrated circuit, classified in class 324, subclass 765.
- II. Claims 9-15, drawn to a method for analyzing an integrated circuit, classified in class 324, subclass 765.
- III. Claims 16-20, drawn to an integrated circuit chip, classified in class 324, subclass 763.
- IV. Claims 21 and 22, drawn to a system for analyzing an integrated circuit, classified in class 324, subclass 158.1.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because:

Inventions III and IV in a first set and I and II in a second set are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP § 806.05(h)). In the instant case the apparatus can bee used to practice a plurality of methods as disclosed.

Inventions I and II are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the combination does not require all of the details of the subcombination and at least claim 1 serves as an evidence claim that such is the case. The subcombination has separate utility such as y itself for its intended purpose or in a different combination.

Each of Inventions III and IV do not require the remaining of inventions III and IV.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).

Any inquiry concerning this communication should be directed to Ernest F. Karlsen at telephone number 571-272-1961.
